IN spring, 1907, the State Legislature increased the annual appropriation for the State Normal and Industrial School and made it "somewhat commensurate with the needs of the institution . . . consequently it will be possible to make further improvements from time to time."

Acting-President J. I. Foust was unanimously chosen as the second President of the institution by the Board of Directors.

Of much interest . . . Ben Greet's players from England presented open-air performances in Peabody Park of two Shakespearean plays: "As You Like It" and "Twelfth Night." The performances, given exactly as in England, were under the personal direction of Mr. Greet, who was "indeed seen in them."

IN spring, 1932, bids on the proposed Alumnae building were opened.

A big crowd "was given insight into the distinctive characteristics of members of faculty, lecturers, and other entertainers who had visited the college during the year" by the "Excelsion Class of 1932" in their performance . . . All-Us in Wonderland.

IN spring, 1947, Dr. Jackson, reporting to the student body on legislative grants to the college, declared "this is the beginning of a new era in the progress and development of Woman's College." $3,177,600, appropriated for permanent improvements, will be used for a library, a student union, two new residence halls, and an addition to the Home Economics building.

The Greensboro City Council adopted a resolution setting the closing of Walker Avenue through the College on the date that the space would be needed for the actual construction of a building bridging the avenue.

119 schools were represented at the eleventh national conference of the Athletic Federation of College Women, meeting at Woman's College.

The Alumnae Association of the Woman's College welcomes William Clyde Friday as President of the University of North Carolina. We look to the future of the College with him . . . and with Frances Friday, five years old and a prospective member of the Class of '74.

One afternoon not long ago Frances' father brought her to the campus for an introduction to...

To Frances Friday, five, the ceilings were high; the buildings were large; and the sidewalks were endless. There was a large grey kitten with pink ears; a persistent cameraman; and a friendly, curious following of students. There were things college girls know more about, and things only a five-year-old could know.*

To Frances Friday of the Class of '74, these impressions will seem far away and no longer the same. Whatever changes she finds, she will remember the friendliness and the atmosphere of democracy and learning that reassures the future of the Woman's College.*

New Chancellor

To the Alumnae of Woman's College

My family and I send personal greetings to each of you, the Woman's College alumnae, wherever you may be. We do this in a spirit of enthusiasm and high expectation tempered with humility. Already we have received expressions of warm cordiality and loyal support from many of you as well as from students and faculty.

Those of you to whom the College is still "N.C.C.W." will be pleased to know that I have just had a nice visit with Dr. Walter C. Jackson, Chancellor Emeritus, and with Mrs. Julius I. Foust, wife of the late Dr. Foust who was President of the College from 1906 to 1934. Both retain their active interest in your Alma Mater and send their greetings to you.

It is, of course, too early for me to have clear ideas of the desirable lines of development which lie ahead. Of one thing I am certain, however. We must continue to stress excellence in everything we undertake. Nothing less than the best must satisfy us as we seek to fulfill the dreams of Charles Duncan McIver, Harriet Elliott, and the host of others who have molded the College.

You will be pleased to know that I have received assurance of vigorous support from President William C. Friday and members of his staff. As we look to the future, we gain assurance from the fact that the Woman's College is within the Consolidated University of North Carolina. As part of the University, our mandate is clear. We must maintain the strongest possible program of undergraduate liberal education for women, as well as specialized undergraduate and graduate programs which will merit national recognition.

Our task in seeking these objectives will be much easier due to the effective work of Acting Chancellor W. W. Pierson and his wife who have served so well during the current year.

As signs of spring break through the crusted earth, the campus takes on its usual lovely appearance. This makes us all the more anxious to make the move to Greensboro and get settled in the Chancellor's attractive home. Mrs. Blackwell and I hope each of you will find it possible to call on us some time. Our home, as well as the Alumnae House, will always be open to you.

Gordon W. Blackwell

Dr. Blackwell

THE Board of Trustees of the University of North Carolina at its February meeting approved unanimously the election of Dr. Gordon W. Blackwell as Chancellor of the Woman's College. The appointment is effective July 1. (Editor's note: In October, after Dr. and Mrs. Blackwell and daughters: Millie and Blair, and sons: Gordon and Randy, are established on the campus, we shall "properly" introduce them in THE ALUMNAE NEWS. In this issue we should like to acquaint the Alumnae with Dr. Blackwell's background and experience.)

At the present time Dr. Blackwell is director of the University of North Carolina's Institute for Research in Social Science and Kenan professor of sociology.

A nationally known specialist in community organization, Dr. Blackwell's published works have had to do with community factors in sociology and with education. For four years he was assistant editor of the American Sociological Review; since 1954 he has been editor of Social Forces. He has been director and editor of Studies of Southern Resources for the Southern Association of Science and Industry and director of a study of college teaching of social science in the South for the Southern Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools. For three years he was library adviser to the board of the Air University, and he has recently completed a four-year term as a member of the National Advisory Mental Health Council.

A native of Timmonsville, South Carolina, Dr. Blackwell was graduated in 1932 from Furman University. He holds a master's degree from the University of North Carolina and a doctorate from Harvard University. Before coming to North Carolina in 1941, he was head of the department of sociology at Furman. For several summers he was a field instructor, and later a visiting professor, at Columbia University. He has also served as a visiting professor at Oxford University in England. During World War II he spent two years in Washington working with the Office of Civil Defense on community problems under stress of war.

In a sense, in accepting the chancellorship, Dr. Blackwell will be turning away from his past, but he will be applying the techniques with which he is familiar toward the future growth of Woman's College.

THE MARY FRANCES STONE BUILDING will be dedicated at noon on April 30. Last spring the Consolidated University Board of Trustees named the Home Economics Building in honor of Mary Frances Stone '47, who was killed in an automobile accident in December following her graduation.

During the ceremony, which will be held on the lawn in front of the building, Jean (Stone) Linker '52x, Mary Frances' cousin, will unveil a memorial plaque. Jessie Potts '47, a member of the Home Economics faculty, will pay tribute to Mary Frances.

Members of the General Assembly and their wives, of the Sir Walter Cabinet, of the University Board of Trustees, and of the Board of Higher Education, and other leaders in the field of education will be among the invited guests for the dedicatory ceremony.

GREENSBORO is one of the cities being considered by the American National Theatre and Academy as a possible site for the location of one of forty national legitimate theatres. Mr. Willard Swire, executive secretary of ANTA, met with a group interested in theatre from the Piedmont area on March 16 in Elliott Hall to discuss a plan being considered: that a resident theatre with a director be set-up to present plays every night for forty weeks during a year. The cities closest to Greensboro which are under similar consideration are Atlanta, Georgia; Mobile, Alabama; Nashville, Tennessee; and Louisville, Kentucky.

A FULBRIGHT AWARD for the study of French philosophy and literature at Montpellier University in Southern France has been granted to Joanne Rathman, a senior from Baltimore, Maryland. A student of the Classics as well as of French, Joanne's study abroad will relate classical philosophy to the literature and philosophy of France in the Middle Ages and the Renaissance.

SATURDAY, MARCH 30, was A day for the College; it was THE DAY for the Department of Physical Education. Seventy "alumnae majors" came from Texas all the way to New England to talk about "Notions of Motion" . . . to participate in seminars and forums and in THE NIGHT competition between Odd and Even (years) teams, to witness undergraduate demonstrations, and to hear

Dr. Eleanor Metheny talk about "The Education of Women."

Dr. Metheny, professor of Education and Physical Education at the University of Southern California, is an outstanding leader in women's physical education, lecturer, and distinguished research fellow, and author.

As a climax to THE DAY'S activities, a portrait of Miss Mary Channing Coleman, who was head of the Physical Education department for many years, was unveiled.

WOMAN'S COLLEGE is proud of the fact that the only woman member of the North Carolina General Assembly is an Alumna. Grace (Taylor) Rodenbough, who represents Stokes County, received a master's degree in education from the College in 1952. Her association with the College is further strengthened by her membership on the University Board of Trustees and by her niece, Martha Wilkinson, who is a member of the Class of 1959.

THE NATIONAL COUNCIL on Religion in Higher Education, which sponsors programs of research and consultation on the place of religion on the college campus, has announced the election of Dr. William R. Mueller, associate professor of English, as a Fellow of the Council. An organization, independent of denominational or ecclesiastical connection, the Council appoints each year a small number of educators, recognized for their scholarly competence and active interest in the place of religion in higher education.

THE FACULTY and Administration of the Woman's College extend to you our deepest sympathy. The College had planned to award to Miss Parrott an honorary degree in recognition of her devoted and distinguished service to education and to the state. We greatly regret that she did not live to receive it in person. . . . So read a telegram sent by Acting-Chancellor W. W. Pierson to the family of Miss Hattie Parrott (1904x) on March 2. "Miss Hattie" had died in Raleigh the day before.

For fifty years she had been a leader in public education in North Carolina. When she retired in 1948 as Supervisor of Elementary Education for the State Department of Public Instruction, she was widely hailed as the "First Lady" of public education in the state. Although she retired nine years ago, she remained active in the field of education and became a member of the UNESCO Committee of the International Association for Childhood Education.

A partial listing of Miss Parrott's "extra-curricular activities" serves further to exemplify the service which she rendered to her nation, state, and community: founder and past state president of the Delta Kappa Gamma Society; local, state, and national offices of the Association for Childhood Education, International; Raleigh Woman's Club; charter member and past president of the State Legislative Council, representing the Department of United Church Women and the Federation of Women's Clubs.

A part of her pastor's message at her funeral reads: "As long as truth prevails over ignorance; as long as liberty is more precious than intolerance; and as long as charity and good will overcome indifference and hatred . . . Miss Hattie's spirit and example will triumph in our state, churches, and schools . . . wherever and whenever good and just and merciful causes are supported."

On March 25 the eighth annual Distinguished Service Award for Women of Chi Omega Sorority at the University of North Carolina was given posthumously to Miss Parrott, "educator, pioneer, prophet, author . . . who, through her unselfish devotion to the children of North Carolina, has applied her capabilities to furthering every phase of educational activity."

Truly, her motto was SERVICE.

DR. G. WELTON MARQUIS, dean of the School of Music, will be on leave for the 1957-58 academic year as Fulbright lecturer in the history of American Music at the University of Oslo, Norway. He will be the only American musicologist on Fulbright appointment in Europe during the year.

A SUCCESSION of students kept an individual and group vigil over a strategic spot of the campus one day during March. As one student left to attend class, another came to take her place . . . the spot was never left unguarded. The place? The corner of the yard at the back of the Administration Building, up on the hill across College Avenue from the Soda Shop. The time? The day before campaign "gimmicks" for Student Government elections were allowable. The reason? A perfect place for a candidate's advertisement. Squatters' rights!

KATHERINE WHITE of Dunn (daughter of Rachel (Aycock) White '29) has been elected president of the Student Government Association for next session. Working with her will be Beryl Weckwerth, Springfield, Mass., vice-president; Meeta Carlton, Salisbury, Judicial Board chairman; Loui Cox, High Point, secretary; and Barbara Boerner, Winston-Salem, treasurer.

Sylvia Whitley of Albemarle will serve as president of Elliott Hall; Cordelia Goodnight, Wilmington, as editor of The Carolinian; Rose Wharton, Greensboro, (daughter of Kate (Harrison) Wharton '33) as editor of Pine Needles; Patricia Carden, Concord, as editor of Coraddi; Genelda Kepley, Salisbury, as Interfaith Council president; Emily Ryals, Rocky Mount, as Recreation Association president; Judith Burch, Lake City, S. C., as chief marshal; Ellen Spielman, Greensboro, as cheerleader; and Mary Bartram Robeson, Culpeper, Va., as National Students Association coordinator.

JUNIOR HOUSE PRESIDENTS elected to lead the Class of 1961 when they come in the fall are Peggy Duncan, Fairborn, Ohio; Terry Garrison, Greensboro; Mary Kathryn Hall, Salisbury; Janeen Sand, Upper Montclair, N. J.; Marcia Warford, Winston-Salem; Mary Louise Coleman, North Wilkesboro; Nancy Moore, Littleton; and Melissa McLeod, Lumberton.

DR. RICHARD N. CURRENT, head of the History Department, is the editor of "Mr. Lincoln", a book recently published by Dodd, Mead and Company. The book, which has been reviewed by the New York Times Sunday Book Review and the Book-of-the-Month Club News, is a portrait of the human side of Lincoln and is derived from the four volumes of "Lincoln the President", on which Dr. Current worked with the late J. G. Randall.

THE AVERAGE Woman's College student spends around $200 a year in Greensboro, totaling an estimated $46,000 for the entire student body, according to a Greensboro Chamber of Commerce source.

MISS MARY D. MANSFIELD of Auburn, N. Y., has begun her work as Director of Nursing Education at the College. She is organizing an experimental program in Nursing Education, the expense of which has been underwritten by the Moses H. Cone Memorial Hospital in Greensboro. The program involves a two-year period of academic study, to be followed by a period of internship at Cone Hospital.

The new director in 1952 became director of the country's first experimental basic nursing program at Orange County College in Middletown, N. Y., operated as a cooperative research project in community-college education for nursing. She spent an additional year in teaching and guidance at New York University, following through with the students initially trained in the Middletown project.

She is a graduate of Syracuse, N. Y., Memorial Hospital School of Nursing, and had post graduate work at the Johns Hopkins School of Anesthesia. For four years she was a U. S. Army chief of anesthesia, with a rank of first lieutenant. She has a B. S. degree in nursing education from Catholic University, and an M. A. degree in administration in nursing from Columbia University. She has had further graduate study at Columbia and New York Universities. For two years she served, with the rank of captain, with the U. S. Public Health Service.

INQUIRIES about application for the first class in the experimental Nursing Education program, which will begin in September, 1957, should be directed to Miss Mary D. Mansfield, Director of Nursing, Woman's College (see preceding item).

LU STEPHENSON, a senior history major from Saluda, has been awarded this year's Anna Howard Shaw scholarship, given annually to an outstanding student in the field of social studies.

"DIDJA EVAH" . . . yes, that's what it was . . . the title of the 1957 Senior Show. The theme of the musical, written by Gwen Harrington, remained a Big Secret until show-night. And THE NEWS isn't going to reveal the Big Secret to its readers yet. Commencement comers may have a glimpse of it!

THE LATE DR. J. I. FOUST has been named to the North Carolina Education Hall of Fame. The announcement of the selection of the second president of the Woman's College for this honor was made at the 1957 convention of the North Carolina Education Association in March. Dr. Foust came to the College in 1902 to head the department of pedagogy, after being successively a teacher, principal, and school superintendent. He became president of the College in 1906, after Dr. Charles D. McIver's death, and continued in that capacity for 27 years.

Of Dr. Foust's selection, an editorial in the Greensboro Daily News said: "The North Carolina Education Hall of Fame increases its own stature by adding Dr. Foust to its roll."

TWO COMPOSITIONS by Elliott Weisgarber, associate professor of Music, were chosen for the March 30 program of one of this season's Composer's Forums at Columbia University. Robert Darnell, pianist, and Hans-Karl Piltz, violist, both of the Music faculty, performed the selections: "Third Piano Sonata" and "Sonata for Viola and Piano."

WOMAN'S COLLEGE has given instructional services to 4,250 persons since the beginning of the 1956 summer session, according to Dr. Rollin Godfrey, registrar. Enrollment for the regular session closing in May totals 2,626. There has been an additional enrollment in credit courses of 1,116 persons, including the summer session, extension classes, and television credit courses.

Curry Demonstration School's 368 students, its 56 summer session students, and the 37 children in kindergarten and nursery school total 461 registrants below the college level.

Other enrollment statistics include: Senior Class 407, Junior Class 380, Sophomore Class 583, Freshman Class 702, Commercial students, 216, graduate students (weekday) 50, graduate students (Saturday) 215, and special students 70.

DR. EUGENE PFAFF, professor of history, has been named recipient of a Ford Foundation grant which will enable him to spend from September 1 through June 1 at Columbia University. His study will be centered on the developments and direction of the West European Union.

Interview in Bombay

by Edith Rose

I followed Page (Coleman) Mehta '48 through the corridors at King Edward VII Memorial Hospital and it was like walking through the streets and ghats, the temples and the cluttered bazaars: a conglomerate of milling humans in an endless feverish push. K.E.M. is a municipal institution with five hundred beds — each one occupied and surrounded by at least four hovering relatives. To the visitor it is just another sign of India's struggle against the pressure of its teeming millions: a heroic, almost endless struggle. But not to Frances Page Coleman Mehta, who has made herself part of it. Page is an American married to an Indian. Still in her twenties, she was hired by the World Health Organization of the United Nations to help set up the first physical therapy training center in Southeast Asia.

I began to feel slightly less depressed by the hospital's awful mass impersonality as we entered Page's section. From the smiles of welcome perhaps gratitude on the faces of at least twenty of the sixty waiting patients, I caught the force of Page's dedication. I sensed the magnitude of the job she has done.

In the treatment line there were young men. Some wore Gandhi caps. Some wore turbans with their dhotis (native white trouser dress). Several carried limp arms in gauze slings. There were bent old women who could not stand erect; two, obviously Mohammedans, were in purdah, long veils covering their faces. And among the old and young were many who were almost completely incapacitated — teenagers who dragged legs, wide-eyed children with humped shoulders. As we moved along to the tiny room that was Page's office, a thin ten-year-old stopped in front of us and almost yelled with excitement as he wiggled and shook the index finger of his left hand. Page answered him in Gujarati, one of the three languages most widely spoken in Bombay (Hindi and Marathi are the others). "One of our prize patients," she explained, giving him an affectionate slap on the back-side.

"He was referred to us from the Wadia Children's Hospital for special treatment. He'd cut his hand in such a way that the extensor tendon of the left index finger was damaged. He was a very worried little boy. And at first I couldn't see the reason because the injury was minor and on his left hand. Then I discovered he is a child prodigy who plays the tabla, a type of drum. The technique for this is that the fingers must individually touch the various parts of the drumhead to bring out not only the complicated rhythmic sequences but also different tones. It all requires great finger dexterity and Bulie was rightly worried. He worked like a beaver and did exactly what we told him to do, made an incredible recovery in a very short time."

While Page related Bulbul's story she proceeded to substitute a hospital gown for the green and white sari she was wearing. The green of that particular sari was good with her red hair, which she does Indian fashion in a low knot at the nape of the neck. Page also had adopted the tikka, the red mark worn by Hindu women on their foreheads to promote the health and prosperity of their husbands (or future husbands).

"The sari makes a wonderful maternity dress," Page said. "It's just naturally expandable." When I met Page she was over eight months pregnant and had already given up her full-time job. She was taking the day to show me the center she'd helped to get under way.

Following Page and the three assistants she had trained, I spent the rest of that day watching them put old people who were recovering from strokes under comforting infrared machines. I observed as they massaged the muscles of children who had had polio. And I saw them treat dystrophy and palsy with apparatus that the United Nations had supplied through WHO. This is the daily business of the physical therapist, who, working under a doctor's supervision, uses her skill and healing art to help treat and rehabilitate patients by such physical means as heat, light, water, electricity, massage and exercise.

Two hundred came to be helped during the hours I was at K.E.M. "That's only average," Page remarked at four o'clock. "Sometimes we have as many as three hundred a day."

"But how did you get here? Why here?" I asked. For Page's home was in Gloucester, Virginia.

To Page being in India seems the most natural thing in the world. She is doing what she set out to do: using her professional training to alleviate suffering — and using it in Bombay because Bombay is her husband's home. They met — Page and Harshraj Mehta — at International House in New York, a residence for graduate and foreign students, while she was studying at Columbia Teachers College for a master's in corrective physical education and he was getting a B. S. in accounting at New York University.

"Tell me about Harsh," I said, "and don't bother about trying to be objective."

"There's nothing formal about him," Page began. "I remember the first night we met we sat on a table in the International House lobby because all the chairs had been sent out to be reupholstered. He talked for two solid hours about the game of cricket. I didn't know who he was but he claims I had seen him many times before because he had been running the elevator on the women's side of the house. He used to wash the dishes for me after I got an apartment but I could never get him to cook. His first present to me was a teapot."

"Keep on," I urged.

"He's very quiet," she said, "doesn't have much small talk or social chit-chat. But get him started on something that interests him — cricket or travel or photography or some book he's liked — and he'll give you a blow by blow description. He's very affectionate, especially with his family connections, which I think is something quite typical of Indians. Family ties mean a great deal here, more I think, than they do in such a busy place as the States."

When Harsh got a job with Standard Vacuum, one that would take him back to Bombay, Page says she knew at once that she would go with him. And she knew too that along with marriage she must have satisfying, useful work in her field. So she went to the New York offices of the World Health Organization and presented her credentials: a bachelor's degree in physical education from the Woman's College of the University of North Carolina, her master's, her certificate in physical therapy, plus a year and a half of experience in clinical techniques. Her assignment (given to her partly because she was going to be on the spot): to set up a training and treatment center in a country where none had ever existed. The school she helped organize was to train personnel for the immediate project and for future ones in India. The World Health Organization was to pay Page's salary and that of an English therapist, R. L. Jacques, who would be her associate; WHO was also to supply ten thousand dollars' worth of equipment. The government of India, the state government of Bombay and the Bombay municipal corporation were to share all other costs—the operating expenses. Page was to help work out the managerial details.

From the very beginning it was the school — especially recruiting the trainees — that was the main problem. India desperately needs all its nurses and doctors so it was up to Page not to rob existing professions but to create a new one. One answer to this, they decided at the center, was to accept for physical therapy studies only Indians who had two years of undergraduate work (with a concentration in chemistry and physics).

Out of fifty applicants who wrote in from all over the country, ten were selected for the first-year group—a dedicated, pioneering ten. "You see, it isn't just what we do here with shiny donated equipment and for hundreds of people each week that counts. It is also the people we train to help millions."

Page pointed to the treatment cubicles, the work bars, the apparatus. The municipality of Bombay donated K.E.M. rooms for the treatment center, she explained — two large rooms, set up these partitions, made all that exercise equipment with our own carpenters right here. The people we train have an even bigger job. They may eventually go out into tiny villages where they must devise what can be made—made within a few miles and with materials that happen to be available."

But there are many reasons, Page says, why a therapist in India must be unusually resourceful. There is, for example, the hardly perennial of trying to persuade individuals that they must help themselves, that they must put effort into getting better. And the contemplative nature of Oriental religion aggravates this medical problem in India, Page thinks. Patients will lie for hours for massage or electric treatment, for short-wave diathermy, but when it comes to exercise they lose interest and go back to the local masseur, who doesn't require activity on their part.

"We get everybody," Page said of her patients, "the itinerant chiroprapist, the snake charmer, the fortuneteller, the sidewalk letter writer."

"One lunch hour," she said, "I was eating a sandwich at my desk and I looked up to see a rather unusual trio standing in the middle of the center's gymnasium. They were dressed in long robes, one in black, one in brown, one in brilliant orange. All had long, very oily hair and equally long, oily beards and heavy strings of wooden beads around their necks. I went in to find out what they wanted and before I could ask, the one in orange whipped out a two-foot-long sword, tipped back his head and stuck the blade down his throat until the hilt was touching his lips. He then removed it and calmly handed me the physical therapy department's prescription form referring him for treatment of a stiff shoulder." The sword-swallowing act, Page explained, was merely to insure her personal interest in him as a brother professional and "expert."

"How," I asked Page, "do you communicate with all these people? Do you speak Hindi?"

"Not well," she said. "I'll be studying it for the rest of my life. When I first arrived I studied Gujarati, one of our local languages, daily and with a teacher for four months. But I didn't really learn much for it is so difficult and there is absolutely no common ground with the languages we know, like French and Spanish. The script is even harder to understand and, again, it's different from Hindi. But the minute I started to work in the hospital on reconditioning our quarters I found I had to talk to carpenters and masons and I just made my tongue wag. Now I'll be making real progress. I'll be learning along with my baby."

What about other adjustments — the daily living in a country so different from Virginia?

Page summed it up in one sentence: "I love living in India but I would enjoy Timbaktu or Nairobi if Harsh and our baby were there."

She went on to explain that if she were in a remote Indian village her new life might, indeed, be a terrific challenge. But Bombay is completely cosmopolitan. She and Harsh have a busy, stimulating social life, which includes many American friends as well as Indians, Britishers and other Europeans. Page thinks that the adjustments she has made are no greater than those demanded of any average girl when she marries and assumes the responsibilities that marriage entails. The Mehtas are the kind of intelligent, liberal family she would have chosen to marry into — "But who ever picks in-laws deliberately?" All of them have been deeply involved in the battle for India's independence and any day of the week at their home you meet people who have gone to jail for their country and who have personally experienced newly won self-determination. Page had met her future mother-in-law, a Baroda University administrator, before coming to India, for Madame Mehta was a member of the United Nations Committee on Human Rights and for several years almost commuted to New York for the sessions. "It's exciting and wonderful living in this home. A sort of George Washington Slept Here atmosphere, I tell them, but why don't you come and see for yourself—tomorrow, over a cup of tea?"

The Mehtas (now three generations) live together in a big, rambling apartment on a high hill that always gets a pleasant breeze. There is reliable Birmingham plumbing of 1925 vintage. The living room contains comfortable overstuffed Western couches accented by lovely Oriental tables. On the porch are hammock-like swings, somewhat faded and everywhere; almost mountains of books and periodicals, many of them medical journals and UN publications. The place has a lived-in, undecorated look and it is obvious that the dining room with its big carved armchairs is always ready for visitors from all over the globe. Madame Mehta, a thin, gray-haired woman, hardly spoke of her own activities on the international front: she seemed silently to insist that this was her young daughter's inning. She was taking time off from her professional duties to be with Page during the latter part of pregnancy; Page calls her "Mamma."

"We think of the center as Page's monument," said Madame Mehta. "She's rather young to have one, don't you agree?"

Over tea and spiced Indian cookies—too hot for my throat—we spoke of differences in food and languages, in customs and attitudes. India today is a paradox, I heard, not yet a paradise for women. It is a land where there is violent antipathy to change, where change

April 4, 1957

Dear Alumnae,

Associational Business

Please circle June 1 on your calendar because that is OUR day at Woman's College. Dr. Ellen Winston, foremost woman in North Carolina's State Government, will speak to us, and we hope to have Dr. and Mrs. Pierson and Dr. and Mrs. Blackwell as our guests of honor.

Dacia Lewis and her efficient committee members have some wonderful plans in store for us for the entire Commencement weekend.

Here's hoping we will have the biggest turn-out in our Alumnae history.

Cordially,

Emily Harris Preyer

Commencement

COLLEGE ACTIVITIES will supplement the June 1 and 2 Alumnae program. On Saturday at 4:30 the Class of 1957 will present its Class Day. Two events at 8:30 in the evening will be of special interest to Alumnae: a concert by the College Choir and Greensboro Orchestra in Aycock Auditorium and the Senior Ball in the Elliott Hall Ballroom.

Dr. R. T. L. Liston, president of King College in Bristol, Tennessee, will preach the Baccalaureate Sermon in Aycock Auditorium at 10:30 on Sunday morning. Following the sermon, the faculty will entertain the Seniors, their parents and friends, and the Alumnae at an informal reception in the Elliott Hall Ballroom. During the afternoons (Saturday and Sunday) the new and newly-decorated buildings on campus will be open.

Graduating exercises will be held at 6:00 on Sunday evening on the lawn in front of the library.

IT IS VERY IMPORTANT that you keep this issue of THE ALUMNAE NEWS until after you have received, marked, and returned your BALLOT for the election of officers of the Alumnae Association for 1957-59. Your ballot will be mailed to you soon after THE NEWS has reached you. All of the biographical material on the candidates which is printed in this issue will not be repeated on the ballot. You will use THE NEWS as your guide in voting. Mark your ballot and mail it immediately to the Alumnae Office.

FUN AND INFORMALITY will reign (we do hope not "rain") on May 31, June 1 and 2 . . . Commencement Weekend.

Although Saturday, June 1, will be the big day, things will get underway on Friday. Registration will begin at 4:00 on Friday afternoon, and coffee will be served in the Virginia Dare Room during the evening. Make your plans to come on Friday and spend the night in one of the residence halls. Overnight accommodations will be free (courtesy of the College), but an advance reservation is absolutely necessary. Don't you be one to regret on Saturday that you didn't come on Friday and spend the night. Throughout the weekend you may eat in the College Dining Halls for a very nominal charge.

Registration (and it's very important) will continue in the Alumnae House on Saturday morning until 10:00 when we'll gather in the Elliott Hall Ballroom for the Annual Alumnae Meeting. Dr. Ellen Winston, Commissioner of Public Welfare for North Carolina and "an honorary alumna" of Woman's College, will be our guest and speaker. Results of the election, special recognition of reunioning classes, annual reports, and surprises will be parts of the program, which will end (weather permitting) with a parade . . . wear your "walking shoes."

All of us will "lunch" together at noon in Coleman Gymnasium, but each reunioning class will have a special place all its own. Since we believe that Alumnae come back to see the College, we believe that you really want to stay on campus for lunch instead of having to move to an off-campus location. Spirit and fellowship certainly will benefit from our staying together. We'll make arrangements for non-reunioners and guests, in addition to reunioning groups. Wear "non-perishable", comfortable, informal clothes . . . our aim is an old-fashioned picnic.

The Alumnae Supper . . . buffet and a little "dressier" than the luncheon . . . will begin at 6:00 on Saturday evening in the Elliott Hall Ballroom. It'll be well worth your staying for! Last year's "floor show" was such a success, we're planning another one for this year.

The cost: room	no charge
luncheon	$ 1.50
supper	2.00
registration fee	1.00

$ 4.50 . . not very much for the exciting weekend that's being planned for you.

You will receive more information about the weekend and a reservation blank around the first of May. Be on the lookout for it, and return it to the Alumnae Office immediately. Come on Friday and stay until Sunday . . . You'll be glad you did!

In Memoriam

Dr. Philander P. Claxton (January, 1957)

The list of the charter members of the Faculty of the State Normal and Industrial School, which hangs in the entrance hall of the College Administration Building, bears the name P. P. Claxton, A. M., Pedagogics and German.

Born in a log cabin in Bedford County, Tennessee, ninety-four years ago, Dr. Claxton's early training was in the local schools and on his father's farm. When he was 17, he decided to go to college, and with the help of his parents, he borrowed part of the necessary money from two neighbors and enrolled in 1879 at the University of Tennessee. He brought with him $37.50 which he had earned hauling lumber; he obtained employment enabling him to pay part of his expenses; but he left the university in 1882 still $600 in debt.

Although he had first wanted to be a lawyer, Dr. Claxton decided to accept a teaching post in North Carolina; consequently, he became prominent in the early days of formal education in the State. He was superintendent of schools at Kinston, at Wilson, and at Asheville before he joined Dr. McIver in his work at the State Normal. In the meantime, he had entered Johns Hopkins University as a graduate student, studying the Teutonic languages, English and American constitutions, international law, education, physics, and economics. He also studied in Germany.

Dr. Claxton was at the State Normal until 1902, at which time he returned to the University of Tennessee to found the Education Department. He spoke in every Tennessee County in 1904 in a campaign for better schools, and he was sponsor of a compulsory school attendance law in Tennessee in 1909. From 1911 to 1921 he was U. S. Commissioner of Education and at the time of his death was president emeritus of Austin Peay State College in Tennessee.

Miss Mary Owen Graham (March, 1957)

Miss Graham was a member of the Woman's College faculty from 1908 until 1912. She was a past president of Peace Institute, now Peace Junior College, in Raleigh. Among her survivors are her nephew, Dr. Edward Kidder Graham, former chancellor of Woman's College, and her cousin, Dr. Frank Porter Graham, former president of the University of North Carolina.

Carrie L. Broughton 1899x (January, 1957)

When she was named State Librarian in 1917, a post which she held for 39 years until her retirement, Carrie Broughton became the first woman to head an office in state government. She had joined the North Carolina State Library staff in 1902, at a time when few women occupied state positions.

Minnie (McIver) Brown 1899x (January, 1957)

To serve as the first woman member of the Board of Trustees of the State Normal and Industrial School, founded by her kinsman, Dr. Charles D. McIver, and later as a member of the Board of the Consolidated University of North Carolina, was Minnie (McIver) Brown's distinction. In 1925 Governor Angus W. McLean appointed her to the State Welfare Board, which group she served for twelve years. In addition to her service in the interest of education and public welfare, she prominently served her church and her community.

Deborah (Tomlinson) Parker 1900C (December, 1956)

For a time Deborah (Tomlinson) Parker was associated with her brothers in the establishment of what is now Tomlinson's of High Point. She was a birth-right member of the Society of Friends, and she was active in civic and humanitarian organizations in High Point.

Frances (Cole) Nicholson 1902 (February, 1957)

After her graduation from the College, Frances (Cole) Nicholson taught here for two years. A native of Granville County, she had lived in Guilford College and in Greensboro for 54 years.

Florence Ledbetter 1904 (February, 1957)

Although she taught for several years in Greensboro, social work was Florence Ledbetter's chosen field. From the time of her post-graduate work at the New York School of Social Work until her retirement in 1954, she worked in Orlando, Florida.

Hattie S. Parrott 1904x (March, 1957)

(Item in "Campus Facts, Faces, and Figures")

Undine (Jenkins) Snyder 1909x

Naomi (Neal) Giles 1918 (March, 1957)

Naomi (Neal) Giles died in Indianapolis, Indiana, where she had been living for 28 years. In addition to being an active member of her community, she was an avid hobbyist and a member of the Photographic Society of America. She was interested in book binding and printing and had published a book upon which she had done all the work: narrative, photography, binding, and printing. For a time she was an instructor in chemistry at the Woman's College.

Lou Sullivan Shine 1920x (January, 1957)

From 1937 until her retirement in 1953, Lou Shine was connected with the University of North Carolina Library in Chapel Hill. Before her affiliation with the Library, she taught English at Woman's College and at Winthrop College in South Carolina.

Nellie (Dodson) Boyd 1925x (September, 1956)

Sarah (Crooks) McDuffie 1943 (February, 1957)

After her graduation from Mitchell College in Statesville, where she was president of the student body, and from Woman's College, Sara (Crooks) McDuffie worked a year with the College YWCA and then joined the Red Cross to do recreational work with army personnel in Florida. She was living in Tampa, Florida, where for six years she had been active in Scout work, when she died.

Marguerite T. Senter (x) (January, 1957)

'94 Sudie (Israel) Wolfe writes from the Allison Hotel, St. Petersburg, Fla.: "It is with pleasure that I remember being at the College last June. I am staying in Florida this summer."

'96 Vivian Grey (Shober) Sellars lives at 920 Hargrove Street, Henderson.

'01 The retirement of Emily S. Austin from the Edgecombe County Memorial Library Board prompted the passing of the following resolution: whereas, Miss Emily S. Austin has retired after completing thirty-six years as a Trustee of the Edgecombe Public Library and its successor, the Edgecombe County Memorial Library, and has served as Treasurer for thirty-five years for these two boards; and whereas, she has exercised her duties with efficiency and with the overwhelming desire to make the Edgecombe County Memorial Library increase in its usefulness to the public; now, therefore, be it resolved that the present members of the Board recognize her loyal tradition of work and service and do dedicate to follow her example.

'08 Maud (Barnard) Browne was one of fourteen women nominated for the 1957 North Carolina "Mother of the Year" award.

'10 Jane Summerell of the Woman's College English faculty spoke about Emily Dickinson at the February meeting of the Reviewers Club in Greensboro. Ione Grogan '26 is president of the club.

Laura (Weill) Cone did the ribbon-cutting which opened the new Cone Wing of the Baltimore Museum of Art on February 23. The Cone Wing was the gift of Miss Etta Cone and was meant to provide a permanent home for the valuable Cone Collection of art which she also presented to the museum upon her death. There are more than 3,000 individual pieces in the collection with an estimated value of $3,000,000. It is considered to be the most important collection of modern French paintings and sculpture pieces in America.

'12 Inez Croom is national secretary of the American Institute of Decorators. As guest speaker on March 20 for a program at the New York City Women's University Club, of which she is an active member, she showed colored slides selected from a library maintained by the Institute of Decorators, showing work of its members.

'13 Kathrine (Robinson) Everett is chairman of the International Relations Department of N. C. Federation of Women's Clubs. Her son, Robinson Everett, recently spoke at a meeting of the Durham Woman's Club, using for his topic, "Making Friends of Our Southern Neighbors". He is a member of the Duke Law faculty, and is admitted to practice in North Carolina, the District of Columbia, and before the U. S. Supreme Court and the Court of Military Appeals.

'18 Ruth Wyche was selected in March by the Orlando (Florida) Junior Chamber of Commerce as Teacher of the Month. A staff writer of the Orlando Evening Star found many reasons for this selection when she interviewed Ruth's fourth graders and her faculty colleagues. "She teaches us to think of others first" and "she is always glad to help us when we need her," said her students. "She is not only understanding but gives each child her individual attention; she visits in the homes of her students and sees that the ones who need lunches and clothing are cared for; she has never been known to make an unkind remark about anyone," commented her co-workers in the Lake Como School. "To them (fellow teachers and students)," concludes the staff writer, "she's the greatest."

'20 Rosalie Wilson, director of Christian Education at St. Paul's Episcopal Church in Winston-Salem, "kept plugging in her quiet way for a new Christian education building (at her church) until finally her efforts bore fruit." A new $317,000 building was dedicated on March 7, and Rosalie's energy and pressure are in large part responsible for the reality. In a newspaper interview concerning the opening of the building, St. Paul's rector, Thomas A. Fraser, said of Rosalie: she "is one of the very best directors of Christian Education in the Episcopal Church in the United States. We have had request upon request from churches and other institutions 'to borrow' her service. Several times she has taught courses in Christian education at Salem College. She's terrific, really!"

'22 Helen Dunn (Creasy) Hunter was one of fourteen women nominated for the 1957 North Carolina "Mother of the Year" award.

'23 Mary Norfleet (Blair) Allison lives in Lancaster, S. C., where her husband is a pharmacist.

'25 Polly (Duffy) Bridges was recently elected president of Alpha Eta Chapter of Epsilon Sigma Alpha Sorority in Greensboro.

Neill (Seawell) Briggs is reservationist at the State College Student Union Building in Raleigh. Her husband, Prof. Herman B. Briggs, retired last year, following 40 years of teaching at State College, where he became head of the drawing division of the college's Mechanical Engineering Department. He is now a full-time gem hunter—his lifelong dream has become a reality. They have a son, William MacNeill, who is a junior at Boughton High School in Raleigh.

Three members of the Class of 1925 are next-door-neighbors in Wilmington: Marion (Williams) Wilson lives at 1606 Chestnut Street; Estelle (Mendenhall) Legwin, 1607 Chestnut Street; and Harriet McDonald, 1608 Chestnut Street. When these classmates want a class reunion, they just "go next door." Mary H. Latham '25 spent last Christmas with Marion and her family.

'26 Evelyn Rountree (Stephenson) Wheeler lives at 59 Elm Avenue, Glen Cove, L. I., N. Y.

'27 Cora (White) Loftin lives at 110 Overbrook Circle, Spartanburg, S. C.

'28 Dr. Joyce Cooper visited on campus in January. She recently resigned as Assistant Superintendent of Public Instruction in the State of Washington to take a position as professor of education at the University of Florida, at Gainesville, Fla., beginning February 1st. In Washington her specific job was Director of Instruction. Her superintendent was Dr. Pearl Wannamaker (one of the few women state superintendents.) Joyce received her masters' degree at the University of North Carolina, Chapel Hill. She taught in the Raleigh City School system before she came back to Woman's College where she was first grade supervisor at Curry. She left Curry to go to Teacher's College, Columbia University, where she received her doctor's degree. From there she went to the State Department in Washington.

Virginia (Sloan) Swain's daughter, Betsy (Swain) Wooley, class of '56, has a son, John Rush, Jr. The Wooleys live in Pelham, Ga.

'29 Corinne (Cook) Baker's husband is a major, stationed with the U. S. Army at Ft. Meade, Md., where they are at home.

Louise (Dannenbaum) Falk reviewed St. John Ervine's "Bernard Shaw, His Life, Work and Friends" for members of the Friday Afternoon Club when they met at her home in Greensboro recently.

Vera Hedrick is secretary for Grey Stone Quarry, Henderson.

'30 Bessie Sue (Leeson) Paramore's new address is 408 Valley Lane, Falls Church, Va.

Mary (Pleasants) Baker is homemaking in St. Petersburg, Fla.

Della (Stroupe) Short is extension home economist with Pennsylvania State University.

'31 Betty (Brown) Jester's daughter, Martha, was the only member of the Junior Class at Woman's College chosen for membership in Gamma Chapter, Phi Alpha Theta, honorary history fraternity. Martha also made Dean's List and the honor roll at Woman's College the first semester.

Mary Lucille (Knight) Coleman has moved from Richmond, Va., to 636 Anastasia Avenue, Coral Gables, Fla.

—Aho!—

NOW HEAR THIS . . . WAVES and ex-WAVES! The National WAVES Reunion in Boston on July 26-28 will mark the fifteenth anniversary of the founding of the WAVES. Among the distinguished guests who will take part in the reunion is Mildred McAfee Horton, wartime director of the WAVES, who is to serve as toastmistress at the birthday banquet. For more information, write: National WAVES Reunion Committee, 1957, 495 Summer Street, Boston 10, Massachusetts.

'32 Rebecca (Rabun) Bell's oldest daughter, Henrietta, will be married in June. Betty, second daughter of the Bells, is a junior at the University of North Carolina, Chapel Hill, where she has just been elected to serve as president of Delta Delta Delta next year. She transferred from Randolph-Macon to the University last Fall. The youngest member of the Bell family, Rabun, is in school in Greensboro.

'33 Pauline (Moser) Longest, who is teaching science in Fayetteville, has received recognition from New Delhi, India, because of papers which she prepared on "algae" while she was a graduate student in biology at the University of North Carolina. The director of the Indian Council on Agricultural Research in New Delhi has requested that she send a copy of the report of her work, originally published in the Journal of the Elisha Mitchell Scientific Society, entitled "A Study of the Gilla of Ectocarpus mitchelliae and Codium decorticateum." Pauline is the immediate past president of the Cumberland County Classroom Teachers Association and is currently president of the Cumberland County unit of the North Carolina Education Association.

Jewel Rainey to Dr. Wilkin Richard Stevens, January 5, 1957, Greensboro. Dr. Stevens was graduated from the Medical College of Virginia and interned in Richmond and Roanoke, Va. He served with the U. S. Naval Medical Corps in the Pacific during World War II, and is now house physician at the new Richmond Memorial Hospital, where they are at home.

'34 Ruth (Long) Nordstrom does substitute teaching in Willoughby, Ohio, where her husband is a gas engineer. They have a son, 14 years old.

'35 Mary Parks (Bell) Weather's husband is head of the law school at Wake Forest College, Winston-Salem.

Mebane (Holoman) Burgwyn, who is author of five books for children and teenagers, was the guest speaker for the Greensboro Library Club in February.

'36 Betty (Griesinger) Sink's daughter, Bettina, earned a place on the dean's list for the first semester at Miami University, Oxford, Ohio, where she was a student in the school of arts and sciences. Bettina transferred to Duke University, Durham, at the end of the first semester.

'37 Hermine Caraway received her master's degree in education from the University of North Carolina, Chapel Hill, in 1955. She is now counselor in the junior high school in Rocky Mount. Hermine is also serving as editor of N. C. English Teacher's Magazine.

New York Jobs

A LUMNAE ADVISORY CENTER, Incorporated, a non-profit, advisory, and educational center for college graduates and New York jobs, has now opened its doors so that all college women, regardless of college, may avail themselves of its services. The center, located at 541 Madison Avenue, provides a counseling office for undergraduates and alumnae who want advice and information about New York jobs and a central office through which New York employers may tell colleges and alumnae of their employment needs.

Woman's College alumnae may become Associate Members of the center, for which dues are $10, and then use the center. Placement is done through a subsidiary, the Alumnae Placement Agency, Inc., and Associate Members are entitled to a 25% reduction in the fee if a job is secured through it. College graduates who do not want to join the center, may still apply for a job at the Agency and get a fee reduction of 5% off that allowed by law.

Further information may be obtained from Alice Gore King, Executive Director, Alumnae Advisory Center.

The University

AT the same time that the University Board of Trustees named Dr. Gordon Blackwell to become Chancellor of Woman's College, they filled three other administrative positions of the Consolidated University.

Mr. William Brantley Aycock, husband of Grace (Mewborn) Aycock '39, was appointed Chancellor of the University at Chapel Hill. He has been professor of law and acting dean of the law school at Chapel Hill. A native of Selma, he received his bachelor's degree at State and his master's and law degrees at Chapel Hill. He led his class in the law school and edited the Law Review; he remained after his degree was awarded in 1948 to become assistant professor. During the current session he is visiting professor in the University of Virginia Law School.

Dr. William M. Whyburn, now Kenan professor of mathematics and acting provost of the University, was named vice-president for graduate studies and research, a post supplanting that of dean of the graduate school at the Consolidated University level. A native Texan, he was formerly chairman of the University of California mathematics department and President of Texas Technological College, from which position he resigned in 1948 to head the mathematics department at Chapel Hill.

Mr. Alexander A. Shepherd, Jr., a native of Wilmington, was named business officer and treasurer of the Consolidated University staff. A graduate of Davidson, he took a temporary position in the University business office in 1932, and he has remained in a business connection with the University since that time.

comes slowly, but where, during the last few years, many changes have come with incredible speed. Some Moslem women still wear the veil in India and I saw many young Hindu women trailing respectfully a foot behind their husbands. As for the prevailing attitude, Page spoke with characteristic modesty from experience. "I can only say that here everyone I meet would wonder why not if I were not working. Here I am with education, a profession that is greatly needed and if I did not try to do my bit toward building up the country I would not be in step with the times or with the efforts of most of our family and friends."
